Preface

The descendants of Hudson Berry have contributed a large measure to the development of what is called the American way of life. A descendant of Hudson Berry can look with pride on the accomplishments and contributions of his ancestors to the states of South Carolina, Mississippi, and Texas.

It is the purpose and desire of the authors that this glimpse into this family history will ignite in the hearts of the present generation a desire to strengthen this ideal for which these pioneers lived and died.

It is with pleasure that we record our indebtedness to those who aided us in the collection of material for this volume. The person who did much of the research for the narrative part of this book was Joel H. Berry, Sr. He spent many years in gathering material for this project; and it is, in many ways, through his inspiration that this volume now appears. Miss Elizabeth Webb was kind enough to read the section on the Halbert family and made many valuable suggestions. Miss Mary Riley provided information for the section on the Gaines family. Mr. Wade Harrison provided information for the section on the Harrison family. Mrs. Croom Partridge authorized the inclusion of certain parts of the original Berry chart compiled by Dr. Landrum P. Leavell. Dr. John A. Kelly granted the use of certain references, including the original letters of Reverend William Arnold Gaines. The family of the late Dr. Joseph Arnold Gaines approved certain quotations from his unpublished manuscript, A Family Named Gaines. Marion Leavell kindly furnished some of the pictures which appear in this book. To Montie and Betty, the authors owe debts that can never be paid. Their assistance throughout the preparation of this book has made the task more enjoyable. And then to each member of the Berry, Gaines, and Harrison families who took time from his busy schedule to answer our queries, we would like to record our special thanks.

The Berry Family
In South Carolina

HUDSON BERRY

Hudson Berry was born in Virginia on September 10, 1752. Very little is known about his youth because the records of the county in which he lived during his youth were destroyed at the time of the Civil War. On June 27, 1775, Hudson married Sarah Anthony who was born in Virginia on November 3, 1756.

Sarah's father, John Anthony, a son of James Anthony of Hanover County, Virginia, moved from Virginia to Caswell County, North Carolina about 1777. By 1784, he owned 900 acres of land on the fourth fork of Country Line Creek. John and his wife, Ursley, reared a family of ten children: Jonathan, Elijah, John, William, Joseph, Sarah, Nancy, Jean, and Elizabeth. All these children had been born in Virginia before John and Ursley moved to North Carolina.

The first tax roll of Caswell County lists Hudson Berry as residing in Gloucester District and John Berry as residing in St. David's District. On January 11, 1779, application was made for 610 acres of land in the vicinity of Tom's and Country Line Creeks. This land was granted to Rebecca Berry on October 13, 1783; the indication is that at this time she was a widow. Her name appears in the tax list of St. David's District for 1780 and 1781; but thereafter she is not listed. In 1782, Hudson paid taxes on 350 acres; and John paid taxes on 260 acres. But in 1784, Hudson paid taxes on 400 acres; and John paid taxes on only 210 acres.

Hudson Berry joined the North Carolina Militia and served during a portion of the Revolutionary War. He was not a regular soldier; but as a member of the militia, he spent part of his time in the military service in defense of the state and part conducting his farming operations. Like other militiamen, he received very little compensation for military service.

Hudson, Sarah, and their young children lived on the 400 acre farm which was part of the 610 acre grant of Rebecca Berry. She had sold this part to Hudson in 1787; and he, in turn, sold it on January 28, 1790, when he was "of Lawrence County, South Carolina." In 1779 and 1780, Hudson applied for 500 acres on Jordan's Creek in Orange County, North Carolina; this grant was made to him in 1784 and was sold by him in 1793.

Hudson Berry demonstrated that he was a man of considerable business ability, and he was highly regarded by his neighbors for this. In 1781, he was appointed constable of Gloucester District and served with his father-in-law, John Anthony, who was tax assessor and collector. Both rendered distinctive service as public officials.

William Berry died in Caswell County in 1783. On June 17, 1783, Hudson was appointed administrator of this estate with John Anthony and Rebecca Berry as sureties on his official bond in this capacity.

On March 13, 1786, Rebecca Berry conveyed to "my son, John Berry, for a consideration of love and affection" 210 acres of her original grant of 610 acres. Several years later, on July 29, 1805, Hudson executed a quit claim deed to this 210 acres on which John still lived. Evidently this was done to clear the title.

Hudson was a close associate with his father-in-law in business operations; and John Anthony indicated his confidence in Hudson's ability by issuing on March 3, 1785, the power of attorney to Hudson which authorized him to represent the family in the division of the James Anthony estate in Hanover County, Virginia. This estate was probably partitioned after the death of John Anthony's mother. Some years prior to this, the will of James Anthony was admitted to probate. The terms of this will probably specified that his plantation, slaves, and other property were to be given to his wife for the remainder of her life; and then upon her death, his estate was to be divided among his children. In 1785, Hudson helped in the partition of that estate.

John Anthony died in 1786; and under the terms of his will, he devised "the plantation whereon I now live with the land to it belonging, likewise the plantation on which my son, Jonathan now lives . . . likewise all my negroes, my stock of cattle, horses, hogs, sheep, etc., to my wife Ursley Anthony, for life." The will provided that certain lands were to be given to Joseph, John, Elijah, and other children, and that after the death of his wife, "all my remaining estate to be divided equally among my ten children." Sarah received 150 acres of land, one slave, and other personal property from her father's estate. During the years 1787 and 1788, Hudson and Sarah rendered 1,050 acres of land, one slave, and other property for taxes in Caswell County.

Late in 1788, Hudson and Sarah with their four children Nancy, William, Elizabeth, and Micajah, together with their slave, moved to the Piedmont section of South Carolina which had been opened to white settlement in 1777. They first settled in the Laurens portion of District Ninety-six. Hudson's first purchase of land was made on December 13, 1788; and on January 2, 1789, he bought an adjoining 150 acres. A short time thereafter, he purchased another adjoining tract of land. On this 530 acre farm he built a substantial home. This farm was located on Durbin's Creek, a tributary of the Enoree River. On this rich, fertile creek land, with the help of the slave he had brought with him from North Carolina and other slaves which he had purchased, he engaged in extensive farming operations. He was successful and prosperous in all his endeavors. Three of his children, David, Nathan, and Mary, were born on this Laurens County farm.

On April 3, 1795, he purchased the Michael B. Purkle plantation on the Reedy River in the southern part of Greenville County. This land was only a few miles from his original 530 acre farm in Laurens County. He selected as his homesite a high rolling hill at Cedar Falls which overlooked the junction of the Big Creek with the Reedy River. This was about a mile from Fork Shoals. On this beautiful site he built his permanent two and one-half story plantation home in which he lived during the remaining forty-five years of his life. His other two children, Hudson, Jr., and Sarah, were born on this plantation.

The public records reflect that between the date of his purchase of the Purkle plantation and 1809, he purchased 2,003 additional acres in Greenville County that surrounded the Purkle plantation. At the same time, he purchased other lands across the Reedy River in what is now Anderson County. The Deed Records also indicate his love for South Carolina soil in that he continued to buy additional lands until 1830 when he was seventy-eight years of age. During this same period he sold his land in North Carolina, which included the additional land that Sarah had inherited upon the death of her mother.

The prudent, cautious, and careful financial habits of Hudson and his wife, Sarah, are indicated by the fact that he paid cash for every tract of land that he purchased. He and his wife were pioneers in this Piedmont section; and through hard work, strict economy, and the exercise of sound business judgment, he accumulated sizable plantations located in Greenville, Anderson, and Laurens Counties.

At Cedar Falls, he made commercial use of the Reedy River. Here he operated a grist mill to grind the corn for himself and the other planters in this area. He established a large saw mill and a cotton factory, all of which he and his sons operated profitably with the use of slave labor. The large concrete piers at the falls in the Reedy River which were used in the operation of the saw mill and cotton factory are still standing—a tribute to the resourcefulness of this great pioneer.

At the time of his death, he owned sixty-seven slaves; he operated his cotton plantations, his grist mill, his saw mill, his cotton factory, and his general store. However, he always had time to serve his church, his community, and his state. He died in Greenville, South Carolina, on January 13, 1840. He was eighty-eight years of age. His wife, Sarah, died two years later on April 26; she was eighty-six. Hudson and Sarah are buried at the Fork Shoals Baptist Church Cemetery. All the land for this church was given to the Baptists from the land of their Greenville County plantation. Many of their descendants are buried in this cemetery.

In 1838, at the age of eighty-six, Hudson Berry prepared his own will. It is a thoroughly prepared will. In setting apart plantations in Anderson, Laurens, and Greenville Counties, he described each plantation in detail, giving the names of the persons from whom he had bought each tract of land and the exact price that he had paid for the land and the exact price that each son was to be charged on final accounting. He gave certain slaves and other property to his four daughters but directed that a complete equalization of his estate be made among his children. In a memorandum attached to his will, he named sixty-one of his slaves by name, giving the value of each. He divided the slaves into nine lots of equal value, and gave one lot to each of his nine children. The effect of this division was that each of his nine children received about seven slaves in addition to the specific bequest of certain slaves and other property to his four daughters and specific plantations to his five sons. Hudson indicated his love for his plantation home, his cotton factory, and his saw mill by stipulating that if anyone should wish to sell his or her share in the home place, he or she should sell to some other legatee who might wish to buy. His will indicates that he had an intimate knowledge of every detail of his large estate and a high sense of fairness in the disposition of his property.

The life span of Hudson Berry covered a long, an interesting, and a rapidly changing period in the history of America. At the time of his birth, his native colony was at peace with England, the home of his ancestors. During his youth, he saw the growth of the controversies between the colonies and England. As a soldier in the North Carolina Militia, his principal compensation for his services was the consciousness of a patriotic service well performed. On his North Carolina farm, he and his wife lived through the period of the Continental Congress. Possessing, as many other men did, the pioneering spirit, he moved to the newly opened country in South Carolina; and here, he and his ever increasing family lived during the administration of ten Presidents—Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Adams, Jackson, Van Buren, Harrison, and Tyler. He actively participated in the election of all these men. In 1796, these pioneers participated in their first contested presidential election. John Adams of Massachusetts, a Federalist, like Alexander Hamilton, believed in a strong central government and believed that the rights of the people emanated from the federal government. Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, a Democrat, believed that the power of the federal government emanated from the people and that the government's powers were limited to those expressly granted by the people. Hudson Berry and the other planters were strong supporters of Jefferson. In that election of 1796, Jefferson was defeated; but he was elected four years later.

During this period when our government was being firmly established, when new states were being admitted to the Union and the older states were being developed, Hudson Berry was successfully operating his constantly expanding plantation, grist mill, and cotton factory which were the forerunners of the vast textile mills in that area today.

His life span of almost eighty-eight years covered the really formative period of our American government and of our American way of life. He and his wife, who lived to celebrate their sixty-fourth wedding anniversary with their children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, transmitted to each of them a love for the American way of life and a strong belief in our system of free enterprise which the two had helped to establish.

THE RECORD OF HUDSON BERRY'S SERVICE IN THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

Hudson Berry was a member of the militia of the State of North Carolina, which was in active service during the Revolutionary War. In April, 1783, according to the North Carolina records, Volume 19, page 165, the Senate of North Carolina ordered new certificates to be issued to Hudson Berry and others to replace certificates formerly issued to them but later lost. In Volume 21, page 175, the following resolution of the House of North Carolina was passed on December 5, 1788:

THE BERRY FAMILY IN SOUTH CAROLINA

Whereas it is represented that a resolution of the General Assembly in April, 1783, directing the Auditors of the Hillsboro District to issue sundry certificates therein mentioned, in lieu of others which have been destroyed, was lost and the Certificates never issued agreeably thereto; Resolved therefore, that the Comptroller be, and he is hereby directed to grant Certificates in favor of . . . Hudson Berry . . . for the sum of Nine Pounds, Four Shillings, each, in lieu of the aforesaid, to have interest from the time to which the aforesaid would have done, had they been granted agreeably to the said receipted resolution.

On page 176 of Volume 21, is recorded the following statement: "Received from the Senate the resolution of this House directing the Comptroller to issue certificates of Nine Pounds, Four Shillings, to . . . Hudson Berry . . . , concurred with."

The North Carolina Revolutionary Army accounts, Comptroller's account, reflect that the certificates were issued and that they were for militia service.

THE HALBERTS, THE GAINES, & THE HARRISONS

The Halberts

The family of Hudson and Sarah Berry were closely associated with the family of William and Elizabeth Halbert of Anderson County, South Carolina, in that two of Hudson and Sarah's sons, William and David, married William and Elizabeth's daughters, Elizabeth and Lucinda.

In 1765, William Halbert married Elizabeth Hill, the only daughter of William and Susannah Hill, originally of Virginia but at this time of Surry County, North Carolina. By the terms of his will, executed in 1777, he gave "the plantation on which I now live" to his son, Dan Hill, and "the adjoining plantation" to his son, Jesse Hill. He directed that all the rest of his estate be divided equally among his ten sons and one daughter, Elizabeth Hill Halbert.

In 1788, William and Elizabeth Halbert with their ten children: Joel (who was already married), Martha, John, Enos, Arthur, James, Susannah, Frances, William, and Joshua, together with their slaves moved from Caroline County, Virginia, to the Pendleton District in South Carolina. They settled on the Saluda River about ten miles from Fork Shoals in what is now Anderson County, South Carolina. After they arrived in South Carolina, their other three children were born. William Halbert died in 1808; and his widow, Elizabeth, lived with her daughter, Susannah, and her husband Peter Acker on the Halbert home plantation until her death on November 6, 1836. William and Elizabeth are buried on their own plantation about three miles south of the Big Creek Baptist Church, which they helped establish and of which they were members until the time of their deaths.

Sarah Anthony Berry and Elizabeth Hill Halbert had been born and reared on plantations and were accustomed to plantation life in a pioneer country. They were, therefore, prepared by birth and rearing to help their husbands in the establishment and the development of their plantations in this pioneer country in the upland section of South Carolina.

William Halbert was about five feet, nine inches tall and of stout build. He was calm and deliberate in his manner and actions, definite and precise in his business transactions. He acquired large land holdings in Anderson County along the Big Creek and along the Saluda River. He also accumulated a large number of slaves. His will, which is only two pages long, was quite precise in its terms. He gave each son at least two hundred acres or more, and to each son he gave one or more slaves. He gave slaves and other property to his daughters but directed that the estate be equalized. He gave the "home plantation and all its appurtenances, including my stock of old Negroes" to his wife for her life, with ultimate distribution to his children. This disposition of his estate was exceptionally fair and equitable. All of the thirteen children of William Halbert and his wife, Elizabeth, married in South Carolina; but some of their children and many of their descendants migrated westward into Alabama, Mississippi, and Texas.

The Gaines

Hudson Berry and his wife were also closely associated with the Gaines family. One of his sons, Micajah, and two of his granddaughters, Elizabeth and Clarissa Arnold, married into this family.

Sarah Gaines, who married Micajah Berry, was the daughter of Thomas and Margaret Bush Gaines. They came from Culpepper County, Virginia, to Newberry County, South Carolina, in 1795. Sarah's maternal grandfather was Edward Bush; and her paternal grandparents were James and Mary Pendleton Gaines.

Isabella Gaines, one of Sarah's sisters, married Clement Theophilus Latimer; and they were the parents of James Madison Latimer, who married Mary Dunklin Sullivan. Isabella and Clement are buried at Broadmouth Baptist Church cemetery in Abbeville County, South Carolina.

Margaret Gaines, another sister of Sarah, married General Edmund Ware. Thomas Edwin Ware, one of their sons, married Mary Williams. They had a daughter Anna Ware, who married Garland M. Ryals. Margaret Ware and her husband are buried at Turkey Creek Baptist Church cemetery in Abbeville County, South Carolina.

The Culpepper, Virginia Records prove that Reverend Henry Gaines was the son of James and Mary Pendleton Gaines. The obituary of Reverend Henry Gaines states he died on July 25, 1830. He was ninety-four years of age at his death. He was born in King and Queen County, Virginia. His first wife was the mother of all his thirteen children. The Newberry, South Carolina Records show that he lived in that county during the fall of 1791; then he moved to Abbeville County, South Carolina, where he lived for many years. In 1813, he moved to Pickens County where he lived until his death. He is buried at the Twelve Mile Cemetery near Central, South Carolina.

For more than fifty years, Reverend Henry Gaines was a Methodist minister and was the founder of Gaines Chapel near Donalds, South Carolina. This congregation consisted of Methodists, Baptists, and some Presbyterians. This church was later known as the Bethesda Church. It is thought that this membership finally merged into what is now known as the Old Greenville Presbyterian Church, which is located near Honea Path, South Carolina.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gaines Mauldin remembered her grandfather, Reverend Henry Gaines, very well; and she told her son, W. P. Mauldin, that his life motto was "To live every day as if I were to die tomorrow, and to work every day as if I were to live forever."

The first wife of Reverend Henry Gaines was Ann George, the daughter of Richard and Elizabeth George of Caroline County, Virginia. She was the descendant of Lieutenant-Colonel John George. Among their children were two sons whose descendants married those of Hudson Berry: Jonadab Gaines married his cousin, Jennie Gaines. Both are buried at Gaines Chapel. Edmund Pendleton Gaines married Susannah Broaddus, daughter of John and Frances Broaddus. One of Susannah's brothers, Reverend Andrew Broaddus I, was an outstanding Baptist minister in Sparta, Virginia. Their grandfather was Edward Broaddus who had come from Wales to Virginia.

Still another Henry Gaines comes into the lines of the descendants of Hudson Berry. He was born in Virginia about 1731 and died in Laurens County, South Carolina, in 1796. On October 12, 1792, he and two daughters, Molly and Catey, were received into the membership of the Turkey Creek Baptist Church in Abbeville County, South Carolina. His grandson, Reuben Gaines, stated he had always been told that Henry Gaines was the youngest son of Richard Gaines of Culpepper, Virginia.

Among the sons of Henry Gaines was Robert Gaines. He had a son Enoch Gaines. Enoch married Nancy Shumate, daughter of Strother D. and Annie McDavid Shumate, about 1828. Among their children were the following: James Hampton Gaines, Robert Edwin Gaines, and Mary Elizabeth Gaines. James was married first to Kiziah Arnold and then later to Mrs. Sarah Helen McCullough. Robert married Elizabeth Mahaffey. Mary Elizabeth was the first wife of Reverend William Arnold Gaines.

Elizabeth Arnold, a daughter of William and Nancy Berry Arnold, married Silas Gaines. Clarissa Arnold, another daughter of William and Nancy, married Reverend Nathaniel Gaines. Both Silas and Nathaniel were sons of Edmund Pendleton Gaines and his wife, Susannah Broaddus. Nathaniel and Silas were born at their parents original home in the Enoree section; and while they were small children, their parents moved to Abbeville County, where the boys were reared and educated by such means as the schools in the community then afforded. Nathaniel and Silas lived in the Turkey Creek Baptist Church community. Both of them became members of this church; and Nathaniel was ordained to the ministry by this church in 1821. He spent all of his adult life pastoring churches in this area. Much of his ministry was spent in work with his wife's uncle, Reverend Nathan Berry, who was only seven years older than he. Practically all of their descendants remained in South Carolina and now live in that section.

Reverend Nathaniel and Clarissa Gaines reared a family of nine children. Through an inheritance from his father and mother and by industry and frugality, they were able to give their children the advantage of all the educational facilities of that day and were able to give them a good start in life. Many of their descendants have been active in the business, educational, and religious life of the Piedmont section.

Nathaniel and Clarissa's oldest daughter, Frances Sarah, married William Riley. Their granddaughter, Mary R. Riley, has for many years been active in the Berry-Gaines-Harrison Reunion. She is now executive vice-president and also chairman of the book committee of the Reunion.

Martha, a daughter of Nathaniel and Clarissa Gaines, married Andrew Ramsay. One of their sons is Dr. David Marshall Ramsay of Greenville, South Carolina. He was born and reared near both the Fork Shoals and the Big Creek communities. He was graduated from the University of Virginia and from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. While he was still a young man, he became pastor of the First Baptist Church at Tuscaloosa, Alabama. After serving that church a few years, he became pastor of the largest Baptist church in South Carolina, the Citadel Square Baptist Church. He served as pastor of that congregation about seventeen years.

During all that period, he was Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Furman University. The Board operates Furman University and Greenville Woman's College, both of which are owned by the Baptist denomination. He resigned as pastor of the Citadel Square Baptist Church to accept the presidency of Greenville Woman's College; and he served as president of this college until his retirement a few years ago. He has attended almost every session of the Southern Baptist Convention for more than fifty years and has served on many of its important committees. His daughter, Mrs. Eudora Ramsay Richardson, lives in Virginia, and is the author of several books.

Dr. David Ramsay was born just seventeen years after his great-grandfather, Hudson Berry, passed away. Hudson Berry had lived to hear the rumblings of the issues which led to the Civil War, and Dr. Ramsay was old enough to vividly remember its closing days and the reconstruction period which followed. He has lived to witness the Civil War, the Spanish American War, World War I, World War II, and the Korean War. His life span together with the life span of his great-grandfather, Hudson Berry—with only seventeen years intervening—covers a period of two hundred years of American history. He has continued the pioneering spirit of his grandfather Nathaniel Gaines and of his great-grandfather Hudson Berry.

William Arnold Gaines, a grandson of Reverend Nathaniel and Clarissa Gaines, married Emma Bockhardt; and their son, Dr. Francis Pendleton Gaines, has served as president of Wake Forest College. He is now president of Washington and Lee University. His son, Francis Pendleton Gaines, Jr., is president of Wofford College at Spartanburg, South Carolina.

Many other descendants of Reverend Nathaniel Gaines have been active in the affairs of South Carolina and of Virginia. A grandson, Dr. R. E. Gaines, was a member of the faculty of the University of Richmond; and another grandson, Dr. Tillman Roland Gaines, was a founder of the Baptist Courier of South Carolina.

The Harrisons

Hudson Berry and his wife likewise were intimately associated with another pioneer family of this section, the Harrisons. Micajah Berry and his wife, Sarah Gaines Berry, had only one child, Nancy. She married Dr. James P. Harrison.

James Harrison and his wife, Elizabeth Hampton, the grandparents of Dr. James P. Harrison, together with her father and mother, Anthony and Betty Hampton, and five of her brothers settled at Wood's Fort between Spartanburg and Greenville in 1774. This was during the period of the war between the colonists and the Indians. A British agent and some of his assistants, who were inciting the Cherokee Indians against the patriots, attacked the Hamptons and the Harrisons and took their horses and arms. They then sold them to the Indians. A few days later, a Cherokee chief murdered Anthony and Betty Hampton, one of their sons, and an infant grandson. James and Elizabeth Harrison and her four brothers were away at the time of this massacre. In a later battle, Captain Henry Hampton, one of Elizabeth's brothers, killed an Indian who was wearing the coat of his dead brother. The four brothers of Elizabeth, Edward, Henry, Richard, and Wade, were all officers in the Revolution.

Immediately after the treaty with the Indians was signed in 1777, when the Piedmont section was opened for white settlement, James Harrison and his wife, Elizabeth, settled on the family homestead at Cripple Creek which is about three or four miles from Fork Shoals. Dr. James P. Harrison, who married Nancy Berry, later settled on this plantation. This old plantation with its stately mansion is now owned by Mrs. John A. McPherson of Greenville, South Carolina. She is a direct descendant of James and Elizabeth Harrison. It is one of the fine ante bellum plantation homes still in use in that section.

This home was evidently the scene of much activity during the prosperous ante bellum days. Wade Hampton, the leader of the Democratic forces that defeated the Carpet Bag element in 1875 and restored control of the state to its citizens, often visited his relatives, the Harrisons, at this plantation home. Dr. James P. Harrison, who married Nancy Berry, was a graduate of Yale University and of a medical school in Philadelphia. He became a prominent physician and planter in that area. Many of their descendants live in Greenville and in neighboring sections in South Carolina.

For many years the Berry, Harrison, and Gaines families have held an annual family reunion at the Fork Shoals Baptist Church on the Sunday before Labor Day. This is a large gathering of the descendants of these three pioneer families. Families come from Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Mississippi, and Texas to make this an outstanding event of the year in this community.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE BERRY FAMILY TO SOUTH CAROLINA

In the middle of the eighteenth century, the Piedmont section of South Carolina, embracing what is now Greenville, Anderson, Laurens, Abbeville, and a few other counties, was in the possession of the Cherokee Indians. Following a period of intermittent warfare between the colonists and the Indians, a treaty was signed on May 20, 1777, near the village of Due West (about twenty miles from Anderson, South Carolina) whereby the Cherokee Indians relinquished their claims to this vast territory and moved to a designated reservation. This opened a new territory to white settlement.

A few pioneers had settled in this section prior to that date but not in sufficient numbers to develop the country. Many of those who did were killed by the Indians. A large number of families from Pennsylvania, North Carolina, and Virginia immediately moved southward into this new section of South Carolina. The settlement of this section was so rapid that by 1790, the State Capitol was moved from Charleston to Columbia. Within twelve years after the signing of this treaty between General Andrew Pickens for the colonists and the various chiefs representing the Indians, Hudson Berry, his wife, and their four children had moved from Caswell County, North Carolina, into the Laurens District and a little later into the Fork Shoals area in Greenville County. Edmund Pendleton Gaines and his wife, Susannah Broaddus, James Harrison and his wife, Elizabeth Hampton, and William Halbert and his wife, Elizabeth Hill had moved to this section. These four pioneer families acquired much land, reared large families, and took an active part in the development of schools and churches in this area. In this same area the Williams family, the Leavell family, and the Gambrell family settled. Later, many of the descendants of Hudson Berry married into these families. Mary Berry, a daughter of Hudson Berry, married Richard Williams. He was the son of Samuel Williams, who owned the land where the town of Williamston is now located.

In 1788 when Hudson Berry, his wife, and four children moved from North Carolina to what is now Laurens County, South Carolina, and when William Halbert, his wife, and children moved from Virginia to what is now Anderson County, South Carolina, there were practically no churches or schools in this pioneer section. These families, like all the others who had migrated from various sections of the country to this section, had as their first problem the making of shelter for themselves and the clearing of sufficient land from which they could make a living. They first built log cabins which could serve as a shelter until they could become established. Then they built large and comfortable plantation homes. One of the first thoughts in the minds of these families who settled in this new country was to establish churches in their communities. When Hudson Berry first settled on Durbins Creek in the Enoree section of Laurens County, he and a few other settlers organized the Big Branch Enoree Baptist Church. This was in 1789. This church had only fifteen members. At that time, the only Baptist Association in South Carolina was the Charleston Baptist Association, which had been organized in 1751. This Association was also the first Baptist Association that had been organized in the South. The second Association to be formed in the state was the Bethel Association (1789), which included a small group of small churches established by these settlers. Hudson Berry was a messenger from the Big Branch Enoree Baptist Church to the organization meeting of the Bethel Association and represented the same small church until 1795, when he bought the Purkle Plantation on the Reedy River which included the present Fork Shoals Community. In 1799, the Big Branch Enoree Baptist Church, which then had only thirteen members, and the Horse Creek Baptist Church, which also had only a few members, consolidated with the Fork Shoals Baptist Church and moved the location of the church to a part of the Hudson Berry plantation. He and his wife continued to be active members of the Fork Shoals Baptist Church until they died. For a period of slightly over one hundred and fifty years, he or some of his descendants have served continuously as deacons in that church.

In 1788, when William Halbert and his wife and children moved to the Big Creek Community near what is now the town of Williamston and about six miles from Fork Shoals, a Baptist preacher from Virginia named Moses Holland also settled in the same community. During that year, the Big Creek Baptist Church was organized. Reverend Moses Holland became its first pastor and continued to serve as its pastor until his death about forty years later. William Halbert and his wife were active members of this church until their deaths. Other active members included the members of the Williams family, the Leavell family, and the Gambrell family. For more than a quarter of a century, Joel Halbert, the oldest son of William Halbert, served continuously as a deacon of this church. This was one of the strongest Baptist churches in this section; and, as communities nearby became more thickly settled, this church established missions or what it called "arms" at Neal's Creek, Shady Grove, and other nearby communities. Susannah Acker, the daughter of William Halbert and Elizabeth Halbert, and her husband Peter Acker were very active in the establishment and development of the Shady Grove "arm" of the Big Creek Baptist Church. It finally became an independent church instead of an "arm"; and their son, Reverend Alexander Acker, served several years as its pastor. The Halberts and the Ackers were so liberal in the support of the Big Creek Baptist Church and its branches, including the Shady Grove Church, that on June 23, 1833, the entire congregation of the Shady Grove Baptist Church observed the Lord's Supper at the plantation home of Elizabeth Halbert who, because of her advanced age, was unable to attend church on this occasion. This was a very unusual occurrence and indicates the active support of these churches by the Halberts and their descendants.

By 1802, a large number of churches had been formed throughout the old District Ninety-six which included Greenville, Anderson, Laurens, and other counties in this Piedmont section. Each was established and developed in the same manner that the Berrys, the Harrisons, and the Graces helped establish and develop the Fork Shoals Baptist Church, that the Halberts, Williams, the Gambrells, the Leavells, and the Ackers helped establish and develop the Big Creek Baptist Church and its several "arms," and that the Gaines helped establish and develop the Turkey Creek Baptist Church. In 1802, the Saluda Baptist Association was formed at a meeting at Salem in Anderson County. The Big Creek Baptist Church, the Fork Shoals Baptist Church, the Turkey Creek Baptist Church, and several others withdrew from the small Bethel Association and joined to help form the Saluda Baptist Association, which soon became one of the largest in the entire state of South Carolina. The third meeting of the Association was held at the Big Creek Baptist Church in August, 1804. Reverend Moses Holland was elected Moderator, and Joel E. Grace, a son-in-law of Hudson Berry, was elected clerk of the Association. Both of these men continued to serve in these capacities for several years.

The center of the educational, social, and religious life in these communities was in these churches. The attendance was large, and the members took their church and community responsibilities seriously. Prior to the building of schools, the church facilities were used where the youth of the community could be taught, while other schools were conducted by private teachers in individual homes.

The pastor, the deacons, and the members of these early churches held rather strict reins of discipline over their membership, and in many of these churches there was a question of what the status of the slaves should be in the church. Practically all of these planters owned one or more slaves. In fact, in a few years the slaves outnumbered the white population. In these early days, it was impractical and economically impossible to build separate churches for the slave and the white population; therefore, many of these churches admitted slaves to membership on an equal footing with the white members. The Big Creek Baptist Church had several active slave members; one, named Caesar, was a preacher. Some other churches did not admit them to full membership, yet provided for their attendance at the regular services. And while these slaves were making a great contribution in doing the work in developing these communities, the white members of the churches pursued a liberal attitude toward them in providing for their attendance at all of these churches and for full membership in many of them. All the slaves of this area are buried in a part of the Fork Shoals Cemetery.

In matters of discipline, these churches were very strict. The Big Creek Baptist Church held a member to strict accountability for starting his journey to Charleston on a Sunday. Another was suspended from fellowship for selling corn at one dollar per bushel when the prevailing price was below that figure. Another person was denied membership because he had refused to pay a note to a church member which he justly owed. Even the pastor was suspended from membership temporarily because of a controversy he had with another preacher over a five dollar transaction. Many members were expelled or suspended for drunkenness and failure to observe the Sabbath; and in some of these churches, membership was lost by an absence of three consecutive Sundays.

The Saluda Baptist Association, composed of about thirty churches in this area, held annual meetings in August beginning on Friday night before the second Sunday. People came from far and near in wagons, in buggies, and on horseback. So large was the attendance that on many occasions a brush arbor was built and two simultaneous services were held. As many as six sermons were preached during the Sunday meeting of the Association, three to each congregation. At each meeting, the annual sermon was the important occasion, and the preacher was selected with the greatest of care. Also an outstanding feature was that at each annual meeting of the Association, a Circular Letter was read by someone who had been selected for this task the year before. This Circular Letter reflected the general views of the denomination on the subject assigned. The Berrys, the Halberts, the Gaineses, their children and grandchildren were always in attendance at the sessions of this Association. One can readily visualize the pride of Hudson and Sarah when they attended the session of the Association at Neal's Creek Baptist Church in 1822 and heard their son, Reverend Nathan Berry, present the Association Circular Letter on "The Nature and Character of Regeneration"; and again in 1827 when they attended the Association at the Oolynoy Baptist Church and heard him present the Circular Letter on the subject of "Christian Union." In 1840, Sarah Berry after the death of Hudson who had passed away in January, and of her son, Nathan, who had passed away in June, attended the services of the Association at the Big Creek Baptist Church and heard her grandson, Joel Halbert Berry, read the Circular Letter on the question of "The Sabbath and Its Observance" and heard Reverend Alexander Acker, a grandson of the Halberts, preach the annual sermon. So strong was the conviction of Joel Halbert Berry on the question of the observance of the Sabbath that three years later, when he left South Carolina and moved to Mississippi, he would not travel on Sunday. He and his family stopped on Saturday night for a religious observance of the Sabbath and then resumed their travel on Monday morning.

Prior to 1821, there was no Baptist General Convention in South Carolina. At the meeting of the Saluda Baptist Association at Durbin's Creek in 1820, Dr. Richard Furman, who for nearly forty years had been pastor of the Baptist Church at Charleston, made two proposals: one, that a Baptist General Convention of the State of South Carolina be formed; and second, that a college or institute or academy be organized, particularly for the teaching of young ministers. The following year, under his leadership, the Baptist General Convention of South Carolina was formed. Reverend Nathan Berry was a delegate from the Saluda Baptist Association to this initial meeting and to almost every subsequent meeting until his death in 1840.

As a result of the second suggestion, the Furman Academy and Theological Institute was founded in 1826 at Edgefield with Dr. James C. Furman, a son of Dr. Richard Furman, as headmaster. In 1836, the school was moved to Winnsboro and was called Furman Institute. In 1844, the name was changed to Furman Theological Seminary; and in 1851, it was moved to its present site in Greenville and became Furman University with Dr. James Furman as president. It is one of the oldest Baptist denominational schools in America. In 1859, the theological department of Furman University was moved from Greenville, South Carolina, to Louisville, Kentucky, and became the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. Therefore, out of this Saluda Baptist Association, the organization of which the Berrys, the Gaines, the Halberts, the Williams, the Gambrells, and the Leavells had a substantial part, came the Baptist General Convention of South Carolina and Furman University. Many of the leaders of the denomination in those early years were active members or pastors of the churches composing this Association.

As has been stated earlier, the first problem of these early settlers was to build shelters for themselves. These were log houses built by these settlers and the slaves they brought with them. In 1795, when Hudson Berry purchased the Purkle plantation, the deed of conveyance recited that it included the grist mill at Cedar Falls. Immediately thereafter, he built a large saw mill and cotton yarn mill at Cedar Falls, near Fork Shoals. Other similar saw mills were built where the falls of the rivers and creeks furnished sufficient power. William Halbert had a mill on the Big Creek near his home which he operated until his death in 1808. By the terms of his will, the mill together with the surrounding 332 acres of land was given to his son, William Halbert, who continued to operate it. The log cabins built by these early settlers soon gave way to substantial plantation homes. With lumber from his sawmill and with slave labor, Hudson Berry built his plantation home which consisted of two and one-half stories.

The early log churches gave way to substantial frame buildings even during the first quarter of the nineteenth century. By the middle of the nineteenth century, this section of South Carolina had become a highly developed farm section and many towns and villages had been established.

The first generation of the Hudson Berry and William Halbert families married into the Gaines, Harrison, and Williams families, and into the families of a few of the other settlers in this area. With lumber from the Hudson Berry saw mill, all of the sons and sons-in-law of Hudson Berry built large homes on plantations or farms acquired by them and their father. In like manner, the sons and sons-in-law of William Halbert established homes in the Big Creek community. Elizabeth Halbert died in 1836. Hudson Berry died in 1840; and his wife, Sarah, died in 1842. Their estates were divided and settled among their children. The second generation of their families, some of whom had married, inherited the pioneering spirit of their grandparents and migrated to Mississippi and Texas.

The forebears of the Berrys, the Leavells, the Gambrells, and the Halberts of Mississippi and Texas made a great contribution to the development of a stabilized society of established educational facilities and of a healthy religious life in the Piedmont Section of South Carolina.

In Mississippi

WILLIAM & DAVID BERRY

Three years before the death of William Halbert, William Berry married his daughter, Elizabeth. At the time of the death of William Halbert in 1808, his youngest daughter, Lucinda, was only fifteen years of age. Two years later, she and David Berry were married. By the terms of his will, William Halbert left, among other things, "two young slaves" to each of these daughters, Elizabeth and Lucinda. William and David and their wives, with lumber from Hudson Berry's saw mill and with the help of their slaves built homes on plantations acquired by them and their father, Hudson. The home of William Berry and his family was located on Generostee Creek. They and their neighbors established the Generostee Baptist Church, the land for which was donated by Hudson Berry and his son, David, by a deed dated September 30, 1826. All of the eleven children of William Berry and his wife, Elizabeth, were born on this Generostee Creek plantation. The David and Lucinda Berry plantation was located on the Saluda River not far from the William Halbert home. Their thirteen children were born here.

This second generation of the Berrys and the Halberts was confronted with a problem. David and William Berry and their wives had adequate slave labor to make a good living for themselves and their large families. These plantations were not large enough, however, to afford the eleven children of William and Elizabeth and the thirteen children of David and Lucinda Berry adequate homes. Moreover, soil conservation was not then known; the lands were deteriorating, washing away, and losing much of their fertility. Therefore, the second generation, among whom were Xenophen Franklin, a married son of David and Lucinda Berry, and Joel Halbert Berry, a married son of William and Elizabeth Berry, were confronted with the problem of acquiring a few acres of land, building small houses, and making only a moderate living without adequate opportunities for their young children or do as their grandparents had done and move into a pioneer country where they and their children would have greater opportunities. An able bodied slave cost at least eight hundred dollars. These young couples could not make enough money to buy a farm and a slave or two; and farming without some slave labor was not very profitable. Already some of their relatives had gone westward and settled in the pioneer states of Alabama and Mississippi.

Joshua Halbert, a son of William Halbert, had moved to Tuscaloosa, Alabama, in 1817. He was a Baptist minister in that area; and he and his family conducted somewhat extensive farming operations near Tuscaloosa. He died in 1842. He had three daughters and two sons. His oldest daughter, Mary Theodocia, was born in South Carolina, in 1812. In 1828, she married Reuben Davis of Mississippi, a young man who was just entering the legal profession. They lived at Aberdeen on the Tombigbee River. He became an eminent lawyer in those early days in Mississippi. As early as 1835, he was elected district attorney of the Northeast Mississippi District which included what is now Pontotoc, Tippah, Monroe, and other counties. Later, he served as a member of Congress from Mississippi, and after secession he served in the Congress of the Confederate States. Their beautiful ante bellum mansion, built in 1847, is one of the finest old homes in Aberdeen, Mississippi, today. He was the author of the book, Recollections of Mississippi and Mississippians, which was published in 1890. It is an excellent source of history for this important period of the state. John Halbert, likewise a son of William Halbert, moved to Mississippi in 1818, and settled on the Tombigbee River near Columbus in what is now Lowndes County. This was before the Indians had vacated this section. He and his family were really pioneers. He died on July 7, 1854. They had twelve children and his descendants for the most part live in Lowndes County and the adjoining Oktibbeha County, Mississippi. Joshua and John had written letters to their sisters, Lucinda Berry and Elizabeth Berry, as well as to their mother, Elizabeth Hill Halbert. Mary Theodocia Davis and her husband Reuben Davis, who were intimately familiar with this new state, had written letters to their relatives in South Carolina telling them about the great opportunities in the newly opened and pioneer country of Mississippi.

Among the first of the Hudson Berry family to move to Mississippi were Sarah Hiott Berry and her husband, John Harlen Machen, and their small children. She was a daughter of Reverend Nathan Berry and therefore a granddaughter of Hudson Berry. They settled in a community called Salem in Tippah County, Mississippi, in what is now Benton County. It was about four miles from Ashland, the present county seat of Benton County. The first land purchased by them was on December 25, 1840; and on December 10, 1840, she and her brothers and sisters sold their interest in the Hudson Berry home plantation, the cotton factory, the saw mill to their uncle, Micajah Berry. Doubtless the proceeds of this sale were used to buy this Mississippi land. While they were in South Carolina in 1840 disposing of their interest in the Nathan Berry estate and the Hudson Berry estate, they told all their relatives about the opportunities and about the fertile soil in the northern section of Mississippi.

This new land seemed to offer a solution to the problem then confronting the second generation of the Hudson Berry and the William Halbert families as well as the second generation of other planters in the Piedmont Section of South Carolina.

In 1840, shortly after the death of his father, David Berry and his wife sold their plantation which was located on the Saluda River in Anderson County, South Carolina; and, with their three married children and their ten unmarried children, they moved to Pontotoc County, Mississippi. They settled in the Cherry Creek community. David's oldest son, Xenophen, and his wife and two small daughters settled just north of the Cherry Creek community in Tippah County, on a 160 acre farm.

In 1844, William Berry and his wife sold their plantation home on Generostee Creek in Anderson County, South Carolina, and together with their six married children and five single children moved to Pontotoc County, Mississippi, and settled near the Cherry Creek community. Their first purchase of land was made on April 10, 1843.

As has been stated earlier, Lucinda Halbert Berry, under the terms of her father's will, received "two young slaves" from her father's estate in 1809; and at the same time, Elizabeth Halbert Berry also received "two young slaves." Lucinda and Elizabeth each received an additional slave or two from the estate of their mother, Elizabeth Hill Halbert, in 1836. These slaves, together with the seven slaves received by David Berry and a like number received by William Berry from the Hudson Berry estate in 1840, gave them and their families a sufficient number to help them make the long journey from South Carolina to Mississippi and to help them build homes where they settled.

In 1845, or shortly after the David Berry family and the William Berry family settled in Pontotoc County, Mississippi, Joel Bruton Gambrell and his wife, Jane Gambrell, a granddaughter of Hudson Berry, settled in the Pleasant Ridge community bringing with them their three small children, Newell, Ira, and James Bruton Gambrell. After they arrived, four other children, Annie, Louis, Joel Halbert, and Sallie, were born.

Likewise, about the same time that the Berrys and the Gambrells settled in this section, James W. Leavell and his wife, Emily, and their family moved from Anderson County, South Carolina, to Mississippi, and settled in the Cherry Creek community. Four of the great-granddaughters of Hudson Berry married four of the sons of James W. and Emily Leavell. Sallie Gambrell, the youngest sister of James Bruton Gambrell, married Dr. B. F. Leavell. Corra Alice Berry, the oldest daughter of Nathan Manley Berry, married George W. Leavell. Her younger sister, Lizzie Berry, married Fountaine S. Leavell. Mattie Lou Berry, a daughter of Joel Halbert Berry, married Dr. R. M. Leavell. Throughout all the subsequent years, the Berrys, the Gambrells, and the Leavells, who were closely related by blood and marriage, were intimately associated in the business, the educational, and the religious life of Mississippi and Texas.

Mississippi had been admitted as a state in 1817. At that time, all of the northern and central portions of Mississippi were in the possession of the Chickasaw and Choctaw Indians. By a treaty signed in 1830, the Choctaw Indians ceded all of the central portion of Mississippi to the United States government; and in 1832, at the village of Pontotoc, the Chickasaw Indians ceded the northern portion to the United States government and agreed to move to Oklahoma. This opened these sections of Mississippi to white settlement; and within a period of twenty years William Berry, David Berry, and many of the children of Mary Williams and Nathan Berry had settled in the northern section of Mississippi. In the same manner that Hudson Berry and William Halbert helped develop the pioneer Piedmont Section of South Carolina, the descendants of William, David, Mary, and Nathan helped in the development of the State of Mississippi.

They brought with them an accumulation of fifty years' experience in the development of a pioneer country. All of them knew the details of the operation of Hudson Berry's saw mill, cotton factory, and grist mill. They knew how to select standing timber that was suitable for lumber, how to saw that timber into logs, how to transport the logs to a saw mill, how to convert those logs into lumber, and how to use the lumber to build houses, schools, and churches. They brought with them an adequate supply of cross-cut saws, axes, broad axes, hand saws, hammers, and froes, instruments which they knew how to use. Most of them had attended many log rollings and house raisings. They were, therefore, equipped with a rich background of experience that made it possible for them to develop this pioneer country much more rapidly than the Hudson Berrys, the William Halberts, the Gambrells, the Leavells, and the others had developed the Piedmont Section of South Carolina. Within the brief period of fifteen or twenty years, William and David Berry and their neighbors had developed this section into a rich, prosperous country.

The land along the creeks and streams in northern Mississippi was fertile, and the price for cotton and other farm products was good. There was much activity in building towns, homes, churches, schools, and railroads. Much demand existed for lumber, cross-ties, and farm products. Therefore, the fifteen or twenty year period following their settlement was a prosperous one.

Micajah Franklin Berry, one of the sons of William Berry, capitalized on the vast experience of his grandfather, Hudson Berry, and his grandfather, William Halbert, in the operation of their saw mills. He engaged in the lumber and timber business at Meridian. He established a saw mill and acquired a large amount of standing timber in that area. He sold lumber to the farmers, developers, contractors, and cross-ties to the railroads. He was a very successful businessman.

At the same time, Dr. James Furman Berry, a physician, another son of William Berry, established a plantation along the Tallahatchie River in Pontotoc County, near the present county seat of New Albany in what is now Union County. He was the physician for the early settlers in this area and used the income from his large practice to expand his land holdings, his slave holdings, and his farming operations; and therefore, by the time of the Civil War, he owned and operated a large plantation in addition to practicing medicine.

Nathan Manley Berry, another son of William Berry, taught school for a brief period of time after he arrived in Pontotoc County; he married Jamina Ball and then entered into the mercantile business at Cherry Creek with his father-in-law, Reverend Martin Ball. In addition to this, he operated a nearby farm which he had purchased and on which he and his family lived. He served with distinction as a major in the Civil War. After the death of Reverend Martin Ball, Monroe Stephens became his partner in the mercantile business. Nathan and Jamina Berry reared a family of five children: Corra Alice, Emma, Lizzie, William and Anna Lou. As has been mentioned before Corra Alice married George W. Leavell; and Lizzie married Fountaine S. Leavell. Both of these brothers were reared on a nearby farm and both served with distinction during the Civil War.

In 1874, George and Corra Alice and Fountaine and Lizzie moved to Oxford, Mississippi, where together they engaged in the mercantile business under the firm name of Berry and Leavell Brothers. Their father-in-law, Major Nathan Manley Berry, was their partner. George W. and Corra Alice Leavell continued to live at Oxford all their lives where they reared nine sons: Dr. Landrum P.; Arnaud B.; Dr. James Berry; Dr. George W.; Dr. Frank H.; Dr. Leonard O.; Clarence S.; Dr. Roland Q.; and Dr. Ullin W. These nine Leavell brothers became active and prominent in the educational and religious life of the whole South.

Joel Halbert Berry, still another son of William Berry, settled in the Pleasant Ridge Community which was south of Blue Mountain in what is now Union County. He was a very successful farmer and businessman. He and his wife had a family of six children: Martha Louise, Julius Simpson, William Edwin, James Addison, Cornelia Elizabeth, and Juliette Melinda. They and the Joel Bruton Gambrells were neighbors. Jane Gambrell, the wife of Joel Bruton Gambrell, and Joel Halbert Berry were first cousins since both were grandchildren of Hudson Berry.

Sarah Anthony Burriss, a daughter of William Berry, and her husband, Thomas Burriss, settled in the Cherry Creek community and over the long years of their lives were affectionately known as "Aunt Sarah and Uncle Thomas" to the many relatives in that section. One of their sons, Reverend Luther Rice Burriss, was an active Baptist minister in that section after the Civil War. In later years he moved to Texas where he served as pastor of the First Baptist Church at Paris, Texas. Later he became pastor of the First Baptist Church in Brownsville.

The family of David Berry, who was among the first to settle in the Cherry Creek community, were now faced with a serious problem. David Berry passed away on August 29, 1843. He and Lucinda had brought with them the nine or ten slaves they had in South Carolina and had bought and established a large farm in this Cherry Creek community. Now his wife, Lucinda, had to take charge of the farming. Also, she now had the responsibility of rearing a family of ten single children, eight of whom were daughters. This was a great responsibility in a pioneer country when the services of able bodied men were essential. One of her older daughters and two of her older sons were married and had established small homes of their own. Fortunately, she had two unmarried sons, Posey and Augustus, who could assist her in conducting her farming operations. The oldest unmarried son, Posey, more or less assumed the responsibilities of his father in the management of the farm, the slaves, and the business affairs, and in helping his mother in the rearing of her eight daughters: Elizabeth, Susan, Nancy, Louise, Mary, Teresa, Sallie, and Malinda. Posey married Grace Stephens, a relative of Monroe Stephens. He reared his family at Cherry Creek and lived there all his life. Most of his descendants still live in that section of Mississippi.

XENOPHEN BERRY

Xenophen Franklin Berry, the eldest son of David and Lucinda Berry, was born near Fork Shoals, South Carolina, on December 6, 1812. In 1840, he and his first wife, Margaret Womack, and his parents and other members of the family moved from South Carolina to Mississippi. Xenophen and Margaret settled on a 160 acre farm located just north of the Cherry Creek community in Tippah County. Xenophen's wife passed away about two years after they settled in Mississippi, leaving Xenophen with the responsibility of rearing his two daughters, Elizabeth and Emily.

At that time, a family named Barrett lived in Choctaw County about seventy-five miles south of Cherry Creek. One of the Barrett daughters married William Halbert who lived in the adjoining Oktibbeha County. Mary Celina Barrett, another of the daughters, married Marcus Gray of Choctaw County. They had one son, Marcus Gray, Jr., who was born on July 22, 1843. Shortly after his son's birth, Marcus Gray passed away. Through his cousin, William Halbert, Xenophen met Mrs. Mary Celina Gray; and on October 13, 1846, they were married. Xenophen and Mary Celina reared a family consisting of his two daughters by his first marriage, Elizabeth and Emily; her son, Marcus Gray, Jr., who was killed on July 19, 1864, while fighting at the Battle of Vicksburg; and seven children born to them: Margaret Anne, William Halbert, Augustus Posey, Joel Franklin, Thomas Cicero, Micajah Holden, and Daniel Madison.

On January 4, 1848, Xenophen and Mary Celina sold their one hundred acre farm in Tippah County to his mother, Lucinda Berry; and shortly thereafter, they moved to Choctaw County where their children were reared. They continued to live in Choctaw County until his death on March 29, 1877; she lived on their farm until she passed away on April 2, 1879. They are buried in the Wake Forest Baptist Church Cemetery near Sturgis, Mississippi.

Elizabeth Berry was born October 28, 1840. She married William Blaine on May 1, 1861. They lived and died in Ackerman, Mississippi. They had no children. Elizabeth died on June 15, 1927.

Emily Berry was born on July 19, 1842. She married John Green Leonard. They had only one child, Celina, who was born on July 25, 1870. She married Jim Black. They had eight children born to them, and all live near Ackerman, Mississippi.

Margaret Anne Berry was born on February 22, 1848. She married William A. Edwards on October 3, 1872. They lived near Ackerman in Choctaw County, Mississippi. They had eight children: Lem, Mollie, Lou, Charlie, Non Quincy, Cicero, Gus, and Nettie. These children and their families still live in Mississippi. Anne Berry Edwards died in 1946 just after her 98th birthday.

William Halbert Berry was born on April 3, 1850. He married Martha Childress. They had six children: Posey, Xenophen Franklin, Berthana, Lee, Marvin, and Martin. They moved from Choctaw County, Mississippi, to Haskell County, Texas, about 1890. Their descendants live in Texas and Oklahoma.

Reverend Augustus Posey Berry was born in Tippah County, Mississippi, on February 29, 1852. He moved with his parents, and his brothers and sisters to Choctaw County, Mississippi, where the children were reared. (See Chapter 7 for the discussion of this part of the family.)

Joel Franklin Berry was born on April 5, 1854. He married Lydia Hannah on October 28, 1875. Lydia was a sister of Janie Hannah, who married Augustus Posey Berry. Joel Franklin and his wife, Lydia, had ten children: Ada, Nannie, Minnie, Nora, Eddie, Lula, Effie, Tulia, Lester, and Lois. They and their children moved from Choctaw County, Mississippi, to Delta County, Texas, about 1895. Joel Franklin died at Slaton, Texas, on October 22, 1933; and his wife died shortly thereafter. Their descendants live in Texas.

Thomas Cicero was born on April 24, 1856. He married Rosanna Lanthripp. They had four children: Oscar, David, Lela, and Nathan. All of them were born in Mississippi, but were reared in Delta County, Texas. Thomas Cicero died in Delta County, Texas, in 1901; and his wife died in 1933. Their descendants also live in Texas.

Micajah Holden was born on August 27, 1859. He married Roxie Lancaster. They had four children: Ella, Mallie, Edna, and Thomas. All of these children were born in Mississippi. About 1895, Micajah, his wife, and children moved from Choctaw County, Mississippi, to Delta County, Texas. Micajah Holden died at Cooper, Texas, in 1945. Three of his children, Mallie, Edna, and Thomas, are still living. Edna and Thomas live in Texas; and Mallie Harvey lives in Oklahoma. Ella passed away several years ago. Four of her children live in Dallas; and Ruth and Ruby, her two daughters, live in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Daniel Madison was born on November 25, 1861. He married Virgie Adams, the daughter of Reverend N. Q. Adams of Sturgis, Mississippi. They had five children: Ina, Ada, Non, Ernest, and Tommy D. Daniel Madison died in 1921.

The Hannah family lived just across the Choctaw County line in the western part of Oktibbeha County near Sturgis. William Hannah, who was born in Tennessee, married Lois Ashler Howard of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, on October 25, 1838. As a bride and groom they moved to Mississippi and settled in the Wake Forest community near Sturgis. This was not far from the community where the Xenophen Berry family would settle about ten years later. The Hannahs acquired much of the land in this community and there reared a family of one son, Ralph E., and nine daughters.

On October 28, 1875, Joel Franklin Berry married Lydia Hannah, a daughter of William Hannah. On October 24, 1876, Augustus Posey Berry married Janie Hannah, another daughter of William Hannah. Joel Franklin and Augustus Posey were both sons of Xenophen Berry. On December 11, 1870, Reverend Non Quincy Adams, after the death of his first wife, married Lois Avoline Hannah, a daughter of William Hannah. Reverend Non Quincy Adams was a half-brother of William A. Edwards who married Margaret Anne Berry, a daughter of Xenophen Berry. Virgie Adams, the only child of Reverend Non Adams and his first wife, married Daniel Madison Berry, the youngest child of Xenophen Berry. All of these families lived in the Wake Forest community, and a close relationship existed among them.

Reverend Non Q. Adams was teaching school in Choctaw County at the outbreak of the Civil War. He served with distinction during the war, and in one battle he lost his left arm. He served eight years as a member of the State Senate from Oktibbeha and Choctaw Counties. He conducted extensive farming operations. He was president of a bank in Sturgis; and even after he was seventy-five years of age, he served as a member of the House of Representatives in Mississippi.

Reverend Augustus Posey Berry and his wife Janie Hannah, acquired a portion of the Hannah land, and there their eleven children were born. Reverend Non Quincy Adams and his wife, and Ralph E. Hannah and his wife, Anna Livingston, acquired other portions of the Hannah land. On these lands which were originally settled by William and Lois Hannah in 1839, the Berrys, the Hannahs, and the Adams reared their families. These farm lands are still occupied by their descendants.

The Ralph E. Hannah farm, the Augustus Posey Berry farm, the Non Quincy Adams farm, and the Daniel Madison Berry farm are situated on three sides of the Wake Forest Baptist Church. The Berrys, the Adams, and the Hannahs, and those who married into these families formed the greater part of the membership of this church. At church and Sunday School, the majority of those in attendance were relatives; and at school, the majority of the students were cousins. This Wake Forest community is rich in tradition and still has an exceptionally fine quality of citizenship.

Two very lovely ladies of this early day still live there. Virgie Berry, the widow of Daniel Madison Berry, still lives on their farm near Wake Forest. Anna Hannah, the widow of Ralph E. Hannah, and her son, Erskine Hannah, live in the original house built by William and Lois Hannah. However, Aunt Anna spends much of her time with her daughter, Mrs. Nobie Moore, in Memphis, Tennessee. Erskine Hannah married Ina Berry, one of the daughters of Daniel and Virgie Berry. Their children were born on this Hannah farm. The children and grandchildren of Virgie Berry and Anna Hannah are very active in the religious, civic, and business life of this community today.

During this period when the children of Xenophen Berry were being reared in Choctaw and Oktibbeha Counties, the children of Joel Halbert Berry, who was Xenophen's double first cousin, were being reared in Pontotoc, Tippah, and Union Counties.

William Edwin Berry, his oldest son, married Modena Lowrey and became partner in the operation of Blue Mountain College. Martha Louisa married Dr. R. M. Leavell who later served as a member of the faculty of the University of Mississippi. Cornelia Elizabeth married Dr. James E. Buchanan. Their son, Dr. John E. Buchanan, married Ruby Lowrey who is a granddaughter of General M. P. Lowrey. Dr. John Buchanan is pastor of the Southside Baptist Church in Birmingham, Alabama. Reverend Julius Simpson Berry married Margaret Walker of Baldwin, Mississippi. Miss Linda Berry, a daughter of Julius Berry, has been a member of the faculty of Blue Mountain College for many years.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE BERRY FAMILY TO MISSISSIPPI

The descendants of Hudson and Sarah Berry, of the Halberts, of the Gambrells, and of the Leavells of South Carolina were not only good citizens and business and civic leaders; but they were also very active in the religious and educational affairs of Mississippi.

The families of David and Lucinda Berry, of Sarah and Thomas Burris, and of Nathan Manley Berry were active members and strong supporters of the Cherry Creek Baptist Church. Nathan Manley Berry was a deacon in this church and was superintendent of the Sunday School for more than forty years. He was succeeded as Sunday School superintendent by Dr. B. F. Leavell, whose wife was a great-granddaughter of Hudson Berry. He, in turn, was succeeded by his son, Halbert Leavell. Dr. James B. Gambrell and Thomas Rice Burris were ordained to the ministry by this church. Reverend Martin Ball, the father-in-law of Nathan Berry, was one of the church's first pastors; and Thomas Rice Burris served as pastor for eleven years. James M. Leavell, the father of the four Leavell boys who married into the Berry and Gambrell families, was active in this church. During the pre-war period, this church was one of the most influential churches in the Chickasaw Association. Nathan Manley Berry was treasurer of this Association for twenty-seven years.

Over in the Pleasant Ridge community, Joel H. Berry and his family and his cousin, Jane Gambrell, and her husband, Joel Bruton Gambrell, helped establish the Fellowship Baptist Church. His two sons, Reverend William Edwin Berry and Reverend Julius Simpson Berry, were ordained as ministers by this church. Dr. James B. Gambrell was licensed to preach by this church before he moved to Cherry Creek.

In these early days in northern Mississippi, there was a young Baptist preacher, Reverend Mark Perrin Lowrey, who became intimately acquainted with the Berrys, the Gambrells, the Leavells, the Machens, and the Burresses. He, too, had settled in this section and had much influence over subsequent religious and educational activities in Mississippi and in the South.

Reverend M. P. Lowrey was born in Tennessee on December 29, 1828. As a young man he served as a private in the War with Mexico. Although he arrived too late to participate in the fighting, he acquired military training which would prove to be of great value in subsequent years. In 1849, he married Sarah R. Holmes, a native of South Carolina and a woman of character, courage, and rare common sense. His family had settled near Corinth in northeastern Mississippi where he married and reared a family of five daughters and six sons. After he married, he purchased an eighty-acre farm at Kossuth, not far from Corinth, which he operated himself in addition to his work as a Baptist preacher. During the years before the Civil War, he was a missionary for the Chickasaw Baptist Association. As associational missionary he visited these rural churches, such as Cherry Creek, Fellowship Church, always advocating more and better schools and more and stronger churches. He visited in the home of Nathan Berry, of Joel Halbert Berry, of Joel Bruton Gambrell, of Lucinda Halbert Berry, and of James M. Leavell. He became intimately acquainted with all of them.

At the beginning of the Civil War, he organized a company of which he became captain; but by reason of his previous military training, and his rare ability as a leader, he was immediately and rapidly advanced to the rank of Brigadier General. Throughout his life he was known as the "fighting parson." It is said he prayed with his men in their tents, preached to them in their camps, and led them in their battles. When he entered the military service, he left his wife and several young children on their farm at Kossuth, near Corinth. During the war, for safety reasons, his wife and young children left their farm and moved to his brother's home near Blue Mountain, Mississippi. When he returned from the Army, the entire country was prostrate; and many of the plantation homes were for sale. He sold his eighty-acre farm near Corinth and bought a fine old ante bellum residence known as the Brougher place at Blue Mountain.

He was a strong believer in education; and immediately upon his return, he resumed his work of pastoring churches in this area, serving as Moderator of the Chickasaw Association. He helped to rebuild the churches which were destroyed and helped to establish day schools, country schools, and other places where a person might at least obtain the fundamentals of an education. He was a member of the Board of Trustees of Furman University. In 1868, he was elected president of the Baptist General Convention of Mississippi, a position which he held for ten years. These ten years were the most difficult time in the history of the state.

During this post-war period, he often visited in the home of Joel Halbert Berry who was an active deacon in the Fellowship Baptist Church at Pleasant Ridge and who was Chairman of the Executive Board of the Chickasaw Baptist Association. On many of those occasions, Reverend M. P. Lowrey brought his family with him, including his oldest daughter, Modena—a very charming and lovely young lady. A close friendship developed between Modena Lowrey and William Edwin Berry, a son of Joel Halbert Berry.

The first year after his return from the service, Reverend M. P. Lowrey sent his oldest daughter, Modena, who was then sixteen, to the Buchanan School for Girls at Ripley, Mississippi. In February, 1871, Reverend M. P. Lowrey enrolled his two oldest daughters, Modena and Margaret, in the Baptist Female College at Pontotoc, Mississippi, from which they were graduated in June, 1873, Corra Alice Berry, a daughter of Nathan Manley Berry, had graduated a year or two earlier and was then teaching music in this college. Modena taught part of the time in this college to help defray her expenses.

William Edwin Berry at the age of seventeen enlisted in the army and served the last year of the war. He returned to his father's home and assisted his father in rebuilding the farm. He also helped to rebuild the Fellowship Baptist Church and the schools in that area. During this stay at home, he was ordained to the ministry. While Modena Lowrey was attending the Baptist Female College at Pontotoc, William Berry was a student at Mississippi College, a Baptist institution at Clinton, Mississippi. He graduated in 1875.

In the fall of 1873, after Modena and Margaret had graduated from the Baptist Female College, General Lowrey and his daughters established Blue Mountain College. They used the old Brougher plantation home as a place for the young ladies who were students to board. He built a small building containing two classrooms on the plantation grounds. There were about fifty students the first year; and the faculty consisted of only General Lowrey, Modena, and Margaret.

During the student days of William Edwin Berry and the early teaching days of Modena Lowrey, the friendship between them continued to develop with the result that after William Edwin Berry had graduated from Mississippi College and had finished one year of theological study at Furman University at Greenville, South Carolina, he and Modena were married. This marriage took place at Blue Mountain in June, 1876. At the same time, William Edwin purchased a one-half interest in the college. Throughout the remainder of their lives, they devoted all of their time to the affairs of this institution which has grown into one of the most influential Baptist schools in the South.

Reverend William Edwin Berry taught Greek and Latin and was business manager of the college. He relieved General Lowrey of much of the administrative responsibilities, which left the latter free to pastor churches, to perform his duties as president of the Baptist General Convention of Mississippi, to visit associations over the state, and to speak, preach, and lecture throughout the state in behalf of better educational facilities.

Upon the death of General Lowrey on February 27, 1885, Dr. W. T. Lowrey, his son, became president of Blue Mountain College. He served in this capacity until 1898 when he resigned to become president of Mississippi College at Clinton. He was succeeded by his brother, Dr. Booth Lowrey, who served as president until he retired in 1911. Dr. W. T. Lowrey again became president. In 1925, Dr. Lawrence T. Lowrey, son of Booth Lowrey, succeeded his uncle as president of the college. Dr. Lawrence Lowrey is still president of Blue Mountain College.

William Edwin Berry continued to teach Greek and Latin and serve as business manager of the college until his death in 1919. William and Modena have three children: Joel H. Berry, a business executive in Norfolk, Virginia; Perrin Lowrey Berry, a member of the faculty at Mississippi College; and Clara Etta Berry, who has been associated with Blue Mountain College all of her life.

Mother Berry, as Modena was affectionately called, was one of the greatest women of modern times. All of the people of Mississippi loved her and felt the influence of the rich, full life she lived.

The descendants of Mary Berry, a daughter of Hudson Berry, were very active in Baptist affairs in Mississippi and Texas. She married Richard Williams. One of their daughters, Jane, married Bruton Gambrell. Two of their sons became eminent Baptist ministers. Dr. James Bruton Gambrell was pastor of churches at West Point, Oxford, and Clinton, Mississippi; he was editor of the Baptist Record; and he was president of Mercer University. He moved to Texas and served as editor of the Baptist Standard; he was corresponding secretary of the Baptist General Convention of Texas; and he served as president of the Southern Baptist Convention. His brother, Dr. Joel Halbert Gambrell, was pastor, teacher, editor, and official in the Baptist denominational work both in Mississippi and Texas. In Texas, he served as pastor at Tyler and then later at Marlin. He was editor of the Baptist Standard, and he was superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League. One of his sons, Dr. Herbert Gambrell, is a member of the faculty of Southern Methodist University at Dallas. He is author of many books including Anson Jones, the Last President of Texas.

Corra Berry, a daughter of Nathan Manley Berry, a grandson of Hudson Berry, married George W. Leavell. He was a brother of Dr. R. M. Leavell, who married Martha Louisa Berry, a daughter of Joel H. Berry. For many years, Dr. R. M. Leavell was a member of the faculty of the University of Mississippi at Oxford. George W. Leavell and Corra lived at Oxford about a mile or so from the campus. They had nine sons: Landrum P., James, George, Roland Q., Ullin W., Frank, Clarence, Arnaud, and Leonard. All of these sons of George and Corra Berry graduated from the University of Mississippi. Eight of the boys became full time workers for the Baptist denomination. Dr. Landrum P. Leavell, in 1903, became Field Secretary of the Sunday School Board. In addition to this, he headed the Baptist Young People's Union of the Southern Baptist Convention from its inception until his death in 1929. While he was director of the B.Y.P.U. for the Southern Baptist Convention, his brother, Frank, became Executive Secretary of the B.Y.P.U. for the State of Georgia; Clarence for the State of Kentucky; and Leonard for the State of Arkansas. While they were serving in these capacities, Dr. Roland Q. Leavell was pastor at Oxford, Mississippi; Dr. James Berry Leavell was pastor of the First Baptist Church in Houston, Texas; and Dr. George W. Leavell and Dr. Ullin W. Leavell were missionaries to China. Dr. Roland Q. Leavell is now president of the New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary. Dr. Ullin W. Leavell is a member of the faculty of the University of Virginia. Obviously, this family of great-grandsons of Hudson Berry played an important part in the development of Baptist churches, Sunday Schools, and Baptist Young People's Unions in Mississippi and in the entire Southern Baptist area.

Dr. David E. Guyton, who has lived at Blue Mountain all his life and has been a member of the faculty of Blue Mountain College most of his adult life, in the opening paragraph of his book, Mother Berry of Blue Mountain, said: "All my life I have known and loved the Lowrey and Berry families. Down here in Mississippi, they have become a tradition, synonyms of what is worthiest for record and remembrance."

Conclusion

The center of activity of the community in which Hudson Berry, his wife, Sarah Anthony, their children, and their grandchildren lived was the Fork Shoals Baptist Church. The interest which this family and their descendants have shown in the church, in the school, and in the community activities of this area have contributed greatly toward the development of the social, of the educational, and of the religious life in this part of South Carolina.

When David and Lucinda Berry, and their children, together with the families of William Berry, of Mary Williams, and of Nathan Berry moved to Mississippi, the center of activity for these families became the Cherry Creek community. These families established the Cherry Creek Baptist Church. Nathan Manley Berry was superintendent of the Sunday School and a deacon in this church for over forty years. The membership of this church was composed, for the most part, of the descendants of Hudson Berry.

When the descendants of David Berry moved from the Cherry Creek community to Choctaw and Oktibbeha Counties, the family church became the Wake Forest Baptist Church. This church adjoined the farms of Reverend Augustus Posey Berry, of Ralph Hannah, and of Reverend Non Quincy Adams.

The influence emanating from the Fork Shoals Baptist Church community, the Cherry Creek Baptist Church community, and the Wake Forest Baptist Church community has been far reaching in its consequences. The present generation is richer in character, in background, and in experience by reason of the religious devotion, and of the uprightness of living of their forefathers in these rural communities.

Their son, Thomas Jenkins married Jemima Owens Williams, dau of Owens Williams, who was born in New York of English parents; educated in England; became a stonemason and sculptor; returned to Virginia and settled near where Falls Church was built; all of the ornamental work in this church was done by him.
